Notre Dame's football schedule is ambitious and formidable, both as to the character of games and the distances that must be traversed to play them. Four long trips, the shortest of which is 600 miles, are called for, which is asking a lot of any eleven. The Southlanders figure out that their schedule is of vital interest to every follower of football, inasmuch as the games played may settle the question of a national gridiron champion. It works out in this way: Notre Dame plays Yale, which in turn has games with Harvard and Princeton. Harvard plays Michigan. The Hoosiers also play the Carlisle Indians, who in turn have games with Pennsylvania, Syracuse and other important opponents. Then a further line may be followed through the medium of the West Point-Notre Dame game.

Packey McFarland says that reputation is half the battle when it comes to ring work. "Tuke Ritchie, for instance," he declares, "As champion of the world, he would have the ordinary fighter half scared to death before he entered the ring. But with the title gone, the young fellow coming up is going to feel that as long as someone else beat him he can do the same thing. I know it has worked out in my own case. Indeed, I remember very vividly one tough youngster I was boxing in the middle west. I was giving him everything I had and still he was coming in for more. He didn't know the fix I was in and I didn't propose to let him. So I went where there was nothing else to do, I gritted my teeth to make me appear savage and told him the next round I was going to beat him to death. He just naturally jumped out of the ring and away to his dressing room. They wanted to bring him back, but I said he was done and didn't want to take any more chances."

Joe McGinnity, erstwhile "Iron

Man" of the New York Nationals, who faded from the east several years ago after pitching and winning several double-headers while manager of the Newark club of the International league, was apparently lost his staying powers. He pitched his first game in the Pacific Coast league the other day, for the Venice club. For ten innings he was the chief figure in a 0 to 0 struggle. The eleventh saw three hits in row, then a walk and the former iron man was beaten, 1 to 0.

Over in St. Louis they are saying that George Baumgardner, the husky right-handed pitcher, will leave the Browns next season for either the Naps or Yank camp. They expect Baumgardner will figure in a trade of some sort. St. Louis reports that Branch Rieky is seeking to annex Ray Caldwell from the Yanks for one of his pitching staff in 1915. Baumgardner has said he would like to be a Nap. Funny ambition some ball players have.

Branch Rieky and his St. Louis Browns will train at Houston, Tex., next spring. The Browns had a splendid training season this year at St. Petersburg, Fla., but couldn't get the place again for 1915 owing to some arrangements that went awry.

Where are the shifts of yesterday? The way the Princeton eleven lines up one would imagine it had never been heard of down in the jungle, while Yale shows no signs of the things that Tom Shevlin once wrought. Harvard will keep her wheel shift, but that is a mild affair compared to the other forms used by the Elks and Tigers.

Cy Pieh is one of the luckiest pitchers on the New York team. Whenever Cy goes on the mound the team goes out and makes runs for him. In this respect Jack Warhop is one of the unluckiest.

Missionary Society Met.
The Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the Congregational Church met Monday afternoon with Mrs. C. D. Barnard. Miss Florence Seales was invited as guest of honor and was much surprised by being presented with a set of sterling silver teaspoons and dessert spoon to match, also a pretty center piece; as an expression of appreciation for her faithful and earnest church work. Light refreshments were served and a delightful social afternoon followed.

A Surprise.
Thirty five relatives and neighbors of Mrs. Stella Tomlin surprised her at her home on North Main street, Saturday afternoon, presenting her with a handsome chair and numerous other useful gifts in remembrance of her birthday. A bounteous picnic supper was served from the baskets provided by the guests and a pleasant social evening ensued.

Farewell Party.
Fifty friends of Miss Jenny Furcuth pleasantly surprised her at her country home one evening this week, presenting her with a Javalier and purse. The evening was spent in cards and parlor games and a bounteous picnic supper was served from the baskets brought by the guests. The affair was a farewell for Miss Furcuth who leaves Wednesday for Chicago where she enters a school for nurses.

Weds in Chicago.
Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Ware have received announcement of the marriage of their son Cecil of Chicago to Miss Elizabeth Clausen, of the same place. The couple went to house-keeping at once in the cottage already furnished by the groom at 10444 Avenue J. The groom is manager of one of the Bazley Meat Markets on the South Side of Chicago. The good wishes of the entire community go to the happy couple in their new home.

THE STOKER APPRECIATES THE GOOD JUDGES TIP

CUT loose from the big buigy wad. For a clean, small chew there's nothing like "Right-Cut." It is the Real Tobacco Chew that you hear men boasting to their friends.

Pure, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough. You get the taste of the richest tobacco grown.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. Soak away and slowly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

If your dealer does not sell it, send us 10c. in stamps for a pouch of "Right-Cut" Chewing Tobacco.

UP TO U. S. S.
Speaking in a large way, the principal job ahead of the United States just now is to save money. For 125 years we have borrowed money from Europe. We can't do so any longer. Europe isn't going to have any money to lend. It isn't going to have enough for its own current needs. When we wanted to build the Rock Island railroad, we borrowed the money from England. When we wanted to develop the Anacostia mine we borrowed from the same place. When we wanted to improve the St. Louis and San Francisco we borrowed from France. For other railroads and other improvements we borrowed from England and from Germany. That's all in the past. We can't borrow any more. For the future, if we want to build more roads or electric lines, we must supply the money from our own pockets—or go without. The one great necessity put upon us by the war, the biggest economic need in America today, is to save money. In the past we have not been savers. This table tells the story. It shows, for each country, the number of persons out of every thousand of the population who are savings depositors:

Switzerland	554	Holland	325
Denmark	442	Germany	317
Norway	415	England	302
Sweden	401	Austria	300
Belgium	377	Tasmania	280
New Zealand	350	Japan	270
France	346	Italy	220
United States	89

These figures are eloquent of what is at once our need and our opportunity. This sound advice is from the advance sheets of Collier's Weekly and is well worth thoughtful consideration. We hear much about the pauper labor of the old world and but little about the thrift and frugality of the people. The above table of savings is an object lesson which should cause us to stop and think. The United States is a nation of spenders. Our money comes easy and goes just as easy. In many of the trades the daily wage amounts to as much as the weekly earnings, in many foreign countries, but it all goes, not for necessities, but for luxuries which we have come to consider necessary.

The awful war now in progress must eventually come to an end. It has nearly paralyzed and destroyed the business of the old world, and is revolutionizing the business of this country. Half the population of the world is directly interested and the other half seriously affected. When peace is finally declared this nation will be the first to feel its influence, so far as business is concerned, and every dollar will be needed, in legitimate channels. The era following the war will be an era of unprecedented opportunity for the young men of America. Shall we be ready to grasp it? Is it the important question.

BETTER SUGAR.
Tariff or no tariff the price of sugar is bound to be high for the next few years and every beet sugar factory in the land will be run at a profit. An effort should be made to put the Janesville plant in operation. The country needs all the sugar that can be produced, and no trouble should be experienced in securing labor to grow the crop. The question of seed is not a serious question, as will be seen by the following dispatch from Boston. "Sugar authorities who have carefully canvassed the situation have now come to the conclusion that the United States beet sugar crop for next year instead of being short, is likely to show a considerable increase. Some factories in this country had enough seed left over this spring to sow their 1915 crops at the rate of ten pounds to the acre instead of the normal of 20 pounds. In other words, they had about 50 per cent of their next year's seed requirements. "There is a large surplus of beet seed on the continent. Next year's sowings on the continent will be small for beets and large for aralia in the opinion of Wallace P. Willett, of Willett and Gray, European beet seed merchants and eager sellers to United States growers and already large purchasers for next spring's plantings have been made. It is now merely a question of finding neutral bottoms and landing the seed in New York. All of which shows that the first alarm over our 1915 beet sugar situation was unfounded."

ISMS AND ECHISMS.
The Madison Democrat sums up the Blaine campaign by saying that Blaine, the ultra progressive candidate for governor, "unbodies within the broad scope of his acceptance all the isms and echisms of little parties." It goes a little further and calls Blaine a bolter. It says he never stays put but admits that "at this juncture he is the logical candidate for socialists of all parties. For that is what it amounts to. Simple socialism. Viewed thus, his designation is more natural by far than would have been that of Senator La Follette himself. The latter is not in it with Blaine. He is a mowback conservative in comparison."

"You, Blaine, is the right man for the vote and the vote he receives will be a pretty fair manifestation of the actual socialist membership which the two old parties have been harboring, but under another title." It is a pretty hard arraignment for Mr. Blaine, but judging from the class of men behind him, the disgruntled republicans and democrats, it is pretty conservative after all. All Blaine or his friends can do to go is to obtain an organization with which they hope to force an issue two years from now, but it is a vain hope.

After Philipp has served two years and his efforts in behalf of the taxpayer, working in their interests, is really demonstrated, it will be hard work for the dreamers to set up a golden calf for the simple voters to fall down and worship before. The democrat has hit it right and it closes its article by saying, "Aside from this Blaine is all right."

Irish papers resent the fact that the English government is seeking to enlist as many Irish soldiers as possible for the present war and at the same time not prosecute their search in the direction of the English golf courses, the football fields and the tennis courts. They claim England wants the Irish to fight their war for them and then reap the benefit of it themselves to the detriment of their Irish citizens. Meanwhile the Irish, Scotch and even the French soldiers are singing:

"It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to go;
It's a long way to Tipperary—
To the sweetest girl I know.
Good-bye Piccadilly,
Farewell Leicester Square,
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
But my heart's right there."

These world series are of more importance to us than the names of the men who actually threw the tea overboard to staid old Boston these days. It is so long since they had a genuine champion baseball team that brown bread and beans are forgotten in the rush to discuss the merits and demerits of the Braves and their opponents. Why some Bostonians even forget to read Ralph Waldo Emerson's essays before going to sleep nights these chill October evenings.

War news is most meagre and most unsatisfactory. We are told of great victories by the Germans or the French and English, of advances by the Russians, and the next dispatch contradicts all of them. Twenty years from now the younger generation will read about the war in detail but it will be nothing like the present dispatches by a good deal.

ASKS FOR FACTS.
So much has been said and printed relative to the alleged outrages committed by the German troops who first invaded Belgium at the outset of the present titanic struggle that the following communication from a man well known in Janesville, to a Chicago daily paper, shows the sentiment of the thinking people throughout the country pretty clearly on the merits and demerits of the case. It is a newspaper's duty to the public to print the news that is printed without fear or prejudice. It is the duty of correspondents to send in dispatches on the same basis. News matter should not be colored. It should be unbiased. Two many newspapers in this war are either pro-German or anti-German. They do not appear able to find a happy medium, to confine themselves to printing the news as it happens. The dispatches are bad enough as they reach us, but to color them to suit convenience is unfair to the average reader. Elmore Elliot Pease of Lake Geneva, son of the late Rev. DeWitt Pease, former pastor of the Congregational Methodist church in this city, writes the following communication to the Chicago Tribune, which deserves publication simply to show the trend of public sentiment. Mr. Pease writes:

Lake Geneva, Wis., Oct. 6.—(Editor of The Tribune.)—Bennett's letter in today's Tribune is a star number in your pro-German propaganda, and will bring joy to many readers of the Staats-Zeitung which with doubts as to the English and is calm, dignified, and reasonable. England, mother of democracy, has become a domestic tyrant and scandal monger. Bureaucratic Germany, with its hateful peeping and prying, has become a saint.

In an editorial a few days since you expressed surprise that the Tribune should be suspected of pro-Germanism. Well, of your three war correspondents abroad, has any one of them ever had a kind word for the allies? Has any one of them ever failed to sing praise to the Germans in season and out? You have featured their stuff if it had been revealed from on high. Yet I venture to say that any hamlet in America gets more war news in a day than your correspondent gets in a week. Under German military escort, they hear only German news, and that carefully filtered. Yet when they come cantoring up with their ulian friends, and ask a dazed, heart-broken peasant if he knows anything damnable about the Germans, and who the peasant, looking only at the ulian's faces, and likely not understanding the language, shakes his head, lo! a team of rhapsodical, hysterical, this-is-the-truth-selp-me-God stuff is dispatched across the ocean, and finally blossoms on the front page of the Tribune in display type.

We have ceased to care, Mr. Editor, for any testimony, pro or con, regarding bayoneted men and deflowered women. Perhaps there were none; we all hope so. But the atrocities which make the blood of nine out of ten Americans boil are the studied perfidy of Germany to little Belgium, polling her like an ox, stamping and throttling the breath of life from her prostrate body; the malicious destruction of cathedrals and museums, buildings consecrated by both religion and art; the dropping of bombs, under cover of the night, upon cities not in the theatre of war, regardless of the civilians, the women and children who might be and have been hurled into eternity. And these atrocities are known to the world and not denied by the Germans themselves.

OVER TWELVE MILES OF STREETS OILED

Eighty-Three Thousand Gallons of Oil Spread on Streets in This City During Past Summer.
Figures compiled by Superintendent of Streets C. V. Kerch show that over eighty-three thousand gallons of oil was laid on Janesville streets this year, covering a distance of over twelve miles. The success made of the work this year insures more oiling next year and it is likely an order will be passed authorizing the oiling of all traffic streets as well as the macadam highways. This year trouble was experienced in obtaining petitions for the oil causing much hindrance to the work of city employees and delay.
The experience gained in the last two years convinces the city officials that the heavy oil is superior for the work and this type will probably be used to a greater extent than this year. During the last two rainy days the streets oiled with the heavy oil have not been affected by the water, the "carpet" shedding the water perfectly.
It stopped the work on the Pleasant street sewer today after over a block of the thirty-inch concrete forms have been laid. As yet no serious trouble has been experienced on clogged sewers, the work of cleaning them last week putting them in readiness for the weather.

LIVESTOCK MARKET HAS GENERAL SLUMP

Hog Prices Drop Ten Cents and Cattle and Sheep Meet With Slow Demand.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Another slump of ten cents in hog prices and poor demand for both cattle and sheep in the face of fairly heavy runs were the main features of an off-day on the livestock market. Lard—$10.75@11.50.
Lard—$10.02.

REVIEW OF MONDAY'S MARKET.

Chicago, October 13.—The best beefs offered yesterday sold at $10.50. It was the first Monday in five weeks that $11 steers failed to appear.

The general cattle market was 10c to 15c lower and many fair to good beef steers were unsold. Fancy western grassers reached $9.65.

There was little or no change in heavy and mixed classes of packing hogs, while better grades of light and butchers sold 10c to 15c lower.
Florida Cows to Packers.
Native beef steers were generally 10c to 15c lower, while range cattle went at strong prices. Butcher and packing stock commanded full steady figures, while feeding cattle sold 10c to 15c lower and veal calves about 25c off. Receipts included 8,000 range, and packers had in 1,500 culling cows direct, 1,000 of them from Florida. Quotations follow:
Choice to fancy steers $9.30@10.85
Light to good steers 6.50@9.15
Yearling steers, fair to 7.50@10.80
Fat cows and heifers 6.25@9.85
Canning cows and heifers 3.50@5.10
Native bulls and stags 4.75@8.15
Feeding cattle, 600@1,100 lbs. 5.30@8.15
Poor to fancy veal calves 7.25@11.25
Range steers 6.00@9.65

Hog Range Narrower.
Range of hog prices yesterday was considerably narrower than late last week. Better grades of light and 220 to 300 lb. averages declined sharply, while packing classes held their own; in fact, speculators brought some 330 to 400 lb. averages higher at the start. Pigs and lightweights were in larger supply than a week ago. General quality fair. Quotations follow:
Bulk of sales 7.40@8.00
Heavy butchers and ship- ping 7.85@8.25
Light butchers, 190@230 lbs. 8.10@8.40
Light bacon, 145@190 lbs. 7.90@8.30
Heavy packing, 260@400 lbs. 7.20@7.50
Mixed packing, 200@250 lbs. 7.40@7.70
Rough, heavy packing 7.05@7.20
Poor to best pigs, 60@135 lbs. 4.75@8.00
Lambs Sell Higher.
Strong to 10c higher are conditions in the sheep and lamb trade. Best natives reached $7.95 and top westerns $7.95. Montana wethers sold up to $6 and 34-lb. western yearlings $6.50. Bulk of lambs, $7.25@7.50; about 10,000 feeders making $7.25. Ewes went largely at $4.85@5. Quotations follow:
Lambs, fair to fancy 7.00@7.95
Lambs, culls and select 5.50@7.30
Yearlings, poor to best 5.50@6.50
Wethers, poor to fancy 5.15@6.00
Ewes, inferior to best 2.75@5.25

AT THE APOLLO
"The Fortune Hunter."
To go to a small town in search of a fortune seemed like foolish advice to the fortune hunter but he took the advice of an older man and went to this small town, played his part but turned down the heiress which was not according to his advice. Instead he fell in love with the poorest girl in the place and then set out to make himself a fortune which he did. As a stage production "The Fortune Hunter" was a tremendous success and it is more so as a photoplay. It will be shown at the Apollo tomorrow afternoon and evening.

NOTICE!
HOW ACCIDENTS HAPPEN
Serious accidents often result from trivial causes. On August 13th one of the most prominent business men of Hartford stopped in one of the hardware stores of the city to procure a piece of twine. Finding the cord too heavy to break he attempted to cut it with a pocket knife. The knife slipped and as it fell he reached down to catch it, at the same time stepping abruptly forward toward the counter. The knife caught against the counter with the open blade pointed toward him and his movement drove the knife into his groin cutting one of the main femoral arteries. Although seriously injured, he is expected to recover. He carried a $15,000 Accident policy in The Travelers.

FARM MANAGEMENT CONTEST PLANNED

WILL BE CONDUCTED IN CONNECTION WITH ANNUAL MID-WINTER FAIR.

EXPECT MANY ENTRIES

Commercial Club Will be Sponsor for the Novel Feature Which Should Interest Many Farmers.

Rock county farmers are to be invited to enter the Farm Management contest which will be one of the features of the coming Mid Winter Fair held under the auspices of the Commercial Club in March next at the Auditorium. It is expected that at least sixty farm owners will enter the contest for the prizes offered, the affair being conducted under the direction of the State Agricultural College at Madison.

This was decided upon at the weekly meeting of the directors of the Commercial Club Monday, after listening to a most interesting discussion on the subject by Prof. Otis of Madison, an expert in such matters. Prof. West of the high school faculty and Secretary Markham of the County Y. M. C. A. work were present as guests. The suggestion of making this a feature of the Mid-Winter Fair was met with enthusiasm by the directors and Prof. Otis was certain that sixty farmers would be glad to enter from Rock county. It is made by Prof. James and Miss Kelly of the University Extension work will be present to speak to the women on household economics.

The routine business of the club had been finished at the meeting of the judging of the corn was set for Friday, November 6th. The exhibition of corn samples grown by the contestants will be arranged at the C. A. building and arrangements are being made for a dinner to be given by the retailers' division of the Commercial Club to the contestants and their parents.

Prof. Otis gave a very interesting talk on the value of farm management and the work of the agricultural school along this direction. He said in part that attention has been given to the past in the growing of best crops, and the school has been offering prizes for the best corn, but has never been recognized. In South Carolina by extensive cultivation an acre of ground has been made to produce two hundred bushels of corn, but the cost of producing was so excessive as to make it unprofitable to raise at market prices. Last year Governor Howard offered $300 in cash prizes for the best corn in farm management over the state. Eleven contests with one hundred and fifty farmers competed, and the statistics as compiled by the school of the past year, the best corn was remarkably and produced some very interesting facts.

The idea was to get the farmers to make statements of investment and the prizes were awarded on points, 50 points for management of the farm home, home life and influence in the home 20 points were counted; on fertility of the soil 20 points; on health of live stock 5 points; on general appearance of the farm 5 points. Local meetings were held at various places in the state, each farm was given a number and average; the best ten farms and the poorest ten average in the state were taken and secured from the contest in which the points of interest.

There were but three farms in Jefferson county and eight in Rock county, which took part in the contest, and the showing in some ways was very good, in others not so good. The net result was found to be very closely connected with the operating capital. Where this reached 30 to 40 per cent, the farm was going to money. The number of cows on the farm seemed to be an important factor, the income from crops was relatively small. The general run of livestock is poor, improvement in the livestock helps the income.

At the local meetings held, the last three farms in the section covered were selected to represent the community at the state gathering. A valuable feature was the fact that some of the farms in one section of Rock and Jefferson counties this year and the corn contest committee were instructed to confer with him to the end that suitable prizes might be offered and arrangements completed for including the affair in the annual Mid-Winter fair next March.

Prof. Otis stated that the agricultural school would arrange to include some of the farms in one section of Rock and Jefferson counties this year and the corn contest committee were instructed to confer with him to the end that suitable prizes might be offered and arrangements completed for including the affair in the annual Mid-Winter fair next March.

Prof. Otis stated that Racine county was now carrying on a farm management contest, and the United States government has interested itself in the subject and the work will be conducted on a larger scale in the future.

A reprint of the statistical figures secured from the contest in which the eleven farms in Rock and Jefferson counties participated is given here and the facts shown, clearly indicate as Prof. Otis contends that farms which are well stocked with good cattle will show the highest percentage of profit.

DIVORCE IS GRANTED TO JOSEPHINE BAIRD

Cora M. McGiffin Gets Decree From James I. McGiffin—Two Other Separations.

Judge Grimm granted a divorce today to Josephine Carle Baird from Arthur A. Baird, the grounds being cruelty and non-support. The judgment allows the plaintiff to resume her maiden name. The suit was not contested and the plaintiff and N. L. Carle were the only witnesses called upon to testify.

Corra M. McGiffin secured a divorce from James I. McGiffin both of this city, on the grounds of non-support. There was no application for alimony and the separation was granted upon the testimony offered.

Two other divorces were granted to Janesville parties this morning. Leila E. Montanye secured a decree from Charles C. Montanye on the grounds of cruelty and non-support, and Wilma M. McDermott from Frank M. McDermott on the grounds of cruelty. One child is affected by the latter judgment and the petition for alimony was granted.

There were several other minor matters to real estate which came before the court this morning. Judge Grimm left this afternoon for Monroe where he is holding sessions of the circuit court for Green county.

DRAMATIC CLUB WILL BANQUET NEXT WEEK

Short Business Session Was Held Last Evening at City Hall—Election Postponed Another Week.

During this week, invitations will be sent every member of the Janesville dramatic society by the secretary, inviting them to attend a banquet to be given on next Monday evening at six-thirty, the place to be decided later. The club reached this decision last night at the meeting of the year at the city hall. Committees to be appointed later by the vice president, Miss Mary Buckmaster, will arrange the affair.

The proposition met the approval of all present, when brought up for action. The club believed this would be the best method of getting all the club together, and the night kept many members away. Because of there being so small an attendance, it was decided to hold the election of officers over until after the banquet next Monday, when a business session will be held. This would give every member a chance to participate in the election.

The club decided to send a floral tribute to Mrs. Janet B. Day, director of the organization, whose mother, Mrs. Agnes Bell, passed away Sunday. The meeting was adjourned at nine o'clock.

PURDUE SQUAD WILL DRILL HERE FRIDAY

Conference University Football Team and Followers to Stop Off at Janesville.

Andy Smith, coach of the Purdue Big Nine football team, thirty members of the 1914 squad and a host of followers will put Janesville temporarily on the conference football map this Friday.

The Purdue aggregation will arrive here Thursday night, practice at the Driving Park grounds on Friday and leave that evening for Madison where, on Saturday, they will play with Wisconsin in the annual tussle.

Manager Hugh Nicol, in a telegram to Manager Hamilton of the Hotel Myers this morning completed all arrangements for the stop of his football squad of thirty members here.

According to the dope Smith has as good a batch of football material as can be found in the conference. Wisconsin is expecting a hard fight as the visitors are heavy and fast and have a great knowledge of the game.

Local sports are laying even money on the game as neither team has much of a lead in the betting. As the season, Wisconsin is known to be strong this year, in fact a whole bit stronger than was the case last season, and Janesville has a very full and peppy and a combination that much is expected from the university.

PHILOMATHIAN CLUB HELD FIRST MEETING

Mrs. C. V. Kerch Entertained Organization Saturday Afternoon—War Was Subject Discussed.

The Philomathian club held their first meeting for the winter on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. C. V. Kerch on Jackson street. There was a good attendance. The topic for the afternoon was the war question. The geography of the European continent, the close of the war, the history of the new instruments used in this war were discussed in three very interesting papers, which were read by Mrs. T. O. Howe, Mrs. Walter Holmes and Miss Margaret Younghouse.

It was decided to take up a miscellaneous program for the winter's sessions, the close of the war, light refreshments were served. This club will meet every two weeks, the next meeting being held on Oct. 24th at the home of Mrs. Fred Koebelin.

TARIFF ON FREIGHT INCREASED ON ROADS

Commercial Club Receives Notice on New Schedule of Freight Rates.

W. J. McDowell, secretary of the Janesville commercial club, this morning received notice of the five per cent increase in freight rates, authorized by the Interstate Railroad Commission, from various railroads which had copies of the new tariff schedule.

The rates to and from all points in the territory between Chicago and Buffalo and north of the Ohio river will be increased on all classes of commodities. The increase is largely on higher class freight, the rate only being fractional on the lower classes. The increased rates will be effective on October 24th. As an example, of the new rates, the tariff from Janesville to Cincinnati, Ohio, will be: First class, 76.3; second, 63.3; third, 49.5; fourth, 44.5; fifth, 27.6; sixth, 25.7. The former rates were: First class, 71.3; second, 58.3; third, 45.3; fourth, 40.3; fifth, 22.6; sixth, 20.6.

DISTRICT REBEKAHS CONVENED SATURDAY

Miss Cora Dickenson of This City Presided—Elaborate Program Given at Both Sessions.

The Rebekahs of Dist. No. 23 held a convention in this city on Saturday, Oct. 10, at the home of Mrs. C. V. Kerch, president of the district, presided and Mrs. Alice Mason welcomed the visiting delegates. An elaborate program was given in the afternoon, and in the evening a social hour and teachings of the Rebekah degree were shown. Among those from out of town who attended were Mrs. Mary J. Oakley, past secretary of state; Mrs. J. H. Peabody, past warden; and Mrs. Peabody of Madison.

National Geographic Society War Primer,

Wilhelmshaven—One of the newest and most advanced seaports of Germany, on the northwest side of Jade Bay, 49 miles northwest of Bremen. The city is 280 miles from London by aeroplane and 430 miles by water. Wilhelmshaven was founded a little more than 30 years ago. It has a population of 20,000, and nearly a third of its inhabitants being in the army or navy. Government nautical and engineering schools are located there. The new harbour, one of the most improved in Germany, has a separate section for torpedo boats connected by locks with the Ems and Jade Canal. These works, with the fitting-out harbour and outer harbour are all strongly fortified. The main defence of the town has occurred since 1900. Its industries are almost exclusively machine-shops, iron-foundries and boiler works. The town has a reputation for the excellence of its sea-bathing.

Emden—A city of extreme northwestern Germany, near the efflux of the Ems river into the Bay of Doller and 40 miles south of west of Wilhelmshaven. Numerous canals intersect it, and its many barge houses give it an extremely Dutch appearance. Its population is close to 17,000 and its manufactures include cottons, sailcloth, soap, stockings, leather, tobacco, beer and spirits. The town is also known because of its herring fisheries.

Lens—A town of northern France formerly fortified, nine miles east of north of Arras, and 12 miles southeast of Bethune, on the Souchet. The town was taken several times in the wars of Flanders and in 1345 was the scene of a great battle. It is a town of Bourbon, prince of Conde, over the Spaniards. The town, with a present population of about 30,000, manufactures lace, leather, sugar, oil, soap, brandy and beer. It possesses spinning mills, and bleacheries and brick and lime kilns. The city is in the midst of a rich coal and iron field.

Dunkirk—A strongly fortified seaport town of France, the northernmost in the Republic, 150 miles north of Paris, 40 miles northwest of Lille and 45 miles east of Dover. The town is 25 miles down the coast from Ostende. Its harbor works are on a vast scale, and many canals weave in and out of the town. Its streets are among the finest in France. With Bergues, Bourbourg and Gravelines, Dunkirk forms a group of forts which are defended by canals and inundations. The port's lighthouse throws a ray that can be seen for a distance of 19 miles. The town is engaged in shipbuilding, iron-founding, brewing, and the manufacture of soap, machinery, fishing-nets, lumber and flour. Dunkirk was built in the 10th century and was burned by the English in 1338. Since then it has been sacked by English, Spaniards and successively, its present population is close to 40,000.

Yap—One of the four main islands of the Carolines, in the Pacific Ocean, about 840 miles east of the Philippines. It is the seat of government for the western division of the archipelago, has a high elevation and is frequently visited by heavy storms. Dunkirk is a native of the white man on their shores. In 1875 Germany and Spain asserted their rights in the archipelago and Pope Leo XIII chosen to arbitrate the two countries' differences. He decided in favor of Spain and Germany purchased the island from Spain in 1899. The Yap natives, of a high degree of intelligence, are noted for possessing the oldest form of money in the world. It consists of large limestone discs varying in diameter from six inches to 12 feet and weighing as high as five tons. The "coins" apparently are treasured for their size rather than for use. The population of the archipelago is approximately 40,000.

Monroe Man Undergoes Operation at Mercy Hospital to Cure Wound Sustained a Year Ago.

Frank Clarke of Monroe is at Mercy Hospital recovering from a rather peculiar accident. Over a year ago in an accident on his farm, he had the handle of a pitchfork driven into his back, under his shoulder blade. He received medical attention but the wound was stubborn in healing, causing him more or less pain continually. He journeyed to Mercy hospital under doctor's suggestion to have the wound opened. Local physicians found a piece of the jacket worn at a time in Mr. Clarke's side. The cloth been driven in on the handle of the fork by the force of the impact. Mr. Clarke is rapidly recovering and will be able to return to his home in the near future.

OPENING TONIGHT AT THE EVENING SCHOOL

As Many as Twenty-Five Courses Will be Taken Up by Record Attendance.

Tonight at seven-thirty o'clock, the evening school will open in this city under the management of the Janesville Evening School Association. Each instructor will take a class and a record attendance in every course is expected. Prof. C. F. Knapp looks for an exceptionally large attendance in every class this year.

At least 250 are expected to enter, while it would not surprise Mr. Knapp to have many more. The school is attending the classes tonight. Two new courses not mentioned in the pamphlet published recently and circulated will be introduced, they being commercial law, under the instruction of Attorney Arthur Fisher, and telegraph, under the instruction of Manager E. A. Mohs of the Western Union Telegraph company.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE ETERNAL BALANCE.

THE traveler-man had come back to take one of his periodical looks at "home." Now he was checking up old acquaintances with the Author-ma and the Cynic.

"What's become of T—?" he asked.

The author-man laughed. "Oh, he married and settled down long ago. He's worrying along with the rest of us, wondering if the high-water mark of income will ever reach up to the high coast of living."

"Worrying," ejaculated the Traveler-man. "I can't imagine it. He was the happiest-go-luckiest of all the old crowd."

"It's the inevitable result of increasing years and marriage," interposed the Cynic. "Why, Mrs. T— says he's become such a confirmed pessimist that if he wasn't an optimist he doesn't know where he'd be. She says she has to keep the family supplied with hope, faith, if not charity."

"Have increasing years and marriage made a pessimist of you, too?" asked the Traveler-man, turning to the Author-man.

The Author-man laughed. "No," he said. "I'm the optimist and my wife is the pessimist in our house."

"I rather think," he continued, "that there is usually an optimist and a pessimist in every well regulated household. It is sort of a scheme of nature to maintain her adjustments."

"I pity T— simply because he's nature's pawn. As you say, he was the happiest-go-luckiest one of the crowd. The trouble is that he married a girl even happier-go-luckier and more optimistic than himself. No matter how far T—'s optimism carried him, he's always carried her a bit further."

"In the old days we used to check T—'s optimism when it threatened to carry him far beyond the bounds of common sense. We managed to keep him out of any amount of wild ventures. After T— married, we expected he and his wife would go cheerfully and optimistically to utter ruin. What actually happened was that T— developed conservatism."

"I say he does it instinctively rather than consciously. He represents in his home the same element that the conservative wing represents in our political government; a sort of a check and opposition party to the other."

"I say he does it instinctively rather than consciously. He represents in his home the same element that the conservative wing represents in our political government; a sort of a check and opposition party to the other."

"What's the moral?" asked the Cynic. "The survival of the Most-let or pity the pessimist?"

"I'm not sure that I know," admitted the Author-man. "In T—'s case I should say the latter. He's inclined to believe that Mrs. T— feels, at times, when T— sits on some scheme of hers that Fate played rather a shabby trick on her in marrying her off to a lesser half whose optimism was only skin deep. So she blames poor T— for performing an inevitable and very valuable function of Nature's arrangement."

one cup sugar, one handful mixed spices (whole), add more vinegar if not enough to moisten. Heat this up and pour over onions. A good mustard dressing is also fine for pickles.

Tomato Pickles—Use those that are thoroughly ripe and small round ones. Do not prick them. Let them lie in strong brine three or four days, then put down in layers in jars, mixing with small onions and pieces of horseradish. Then pour on vinegar (cold), and put a small bag of spice into every jar. Cover carefully and set in cool place for a month before using.

Oil Pickles—Select 24 medium-sized cucumbers, slice without paring, let stand in salt water three hours and drain. Mix together dry one cup white mustard seed, one cup black mustard seed, one tablespoon celery seeds, two tablespoons onion seeds. After cucumbers are well drained, put in a crock a layer of cucumbers and a handful of dry ingredients, layer of cucumbers and dry ingredients, and so on until all are used. Over this pour one quart good vinegar and one cup olive oil; let stand six weeks.

THE TABLE.

Tomato Kuchen—Make rich biscuit dough of two cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt, three tablespoons shortening, milk enough to make soft dough. Shape dough into shallow buttered pan and press into it. Sprinkle with sliced tomatoes. Sprinkle with pepper and salt and place piece of butter on each slice. Bake until brown. Good served with gravy, especially pork.

Apple Sauce—Cut out bad spots and worm holes, quarter and cook soft. Then press through colander or sieve. Set back on stove and add sugar to taste. It's surprising how quickly one can do up a bushel of apples, and the sauce is a much better color than when the apples are peeled.

Fried Tomatoes—Select medium-sized firm ripe tomatoes. Peel, roll in flour, salt and pepper them; fry in hot fat and drain. Bacon drippings very good. At the same time fry onions (or these might have been fried first in the same pan). When done, put tomatoes on platter, fried onions over them. Brown a tablespoon flour in drippings left in pan, add a little salt and enough water to make a gravy. Pour over tomatoes and onions. Serve hot.

Spice Drops—This recipe was suggested to me by a friend for using up yolks of eggs after making white cake. One and one-half cups sugar (brown), one cup lard or drippings, half cup baking molasses, yolks of three or four eggs, two teaspoons each of cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves, one heaping teaspoon soda, flour to make like fruit cake. Drop on papered pans as drop cakes.

The Kitchen Cabinet

We should never remember the benefits we have conferred, nor forget the favors received.

Wisdom provides things necessary, not superfluous.—Proverbs.

New potatoes are nice served this way: Scrape, wash and cook until tender in boiling salted water; when tender add a lump of butter, a dash of red pepper and a cup of cream into which has been stirred a tablespoonful of flour. Let cook until smooth and serve hot.

Crown Roast of Lamb.—This is a dish especially nice prepared with spring lamb. Trim the bones from the saddle, using two pieces put together in the form of a crown; tie with string and skewer firmly. On each trimmed bone wrap a piece of salt pork to keep the bones from charring; baste frequently and serve with mashed potatoes in the center, with green peas around the meat as garnish.

Anchovy Canapés—Make small circular pieces of toast and spread each with butter and anchovy paste. Sprinkle with lemon juice and garnish with two strips of pimento put at right angles. Arrange with a garnish of hard-cooked egg and lemon quarters.

Cheese Custard—Butter bread one inch thick; remove crust, cut in cubes, put in buttered baking dish with layers of cheese alternating with the bread, using a cupful of cheese with one beaten egg, one and a half cupfuls of milk, half a teaspoonful of salt, and a few sprinklings of pepper. Pour over bread and cheese and bake until firm.

Red Peppers and Mushrooms—Cut off the small ends of the peppers and take out the seeds. Mix two cupfuls of soft white bread crumbs with half a cupful of thick sweet cream, and a cupful of chopped mushrooms; season with salt; stuff the peppers lightly and bake, basting with butter as they cook. Serve plain or with a sauce.

Nutmeg melons cut in cubes sprinkled with powdered sugar, lemon juice and nutmeg make a delicious dessert when well chilled and served in cocktail glasses.

Dr. T. Felix Gouraud's Oriental Cream

A Serious Matter. "The doctor looked grave when he came out."

"Yes. The patient he went to see owes him for his services during a previous illness."

Possible of Application. "An old woodsman was walking through a forest when he saw a large bear approaching him. Realizing his predicament, he exclaimed: 'Oh Lord, be with me!' Still the bear came on, when the man again prayed: 'Oh Lord, be on my side.' Seeing the bear continue to approach, the woodsman, whipping out his knife, exclaimed: 'Oh Lord, if you won't be on my side, just declare neutrality, and I'll show you the gold-darned bear fight you ever saw in your life!'"

The Wife's Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

While the portly man of the house drank his coffee and his breakfast behind his newspaper, the wife nervously broke off bits of toast that remained on her plate untouched. Finally she fed the toast to the dog, and prepared to rise, she wet her lips with a sip of water and said in a scarcely audible tone:

"Charles, I am sorry to trouble you, but—"

She stopped and the husband, who had been looking at the first time to become conscious of her presence.

"We'll see," he said, as she did not proceed.

"I have been hoping it would not be necessary to trouble you, but I really must have a new coat this winter. My old one is quite worn, and my sables have become shabby," she continued feverishly.

"Why, really, this is almost amusing," observed the man. "If you want a coat, why in the world don't you go and buy one?"

She flushed, and her lips quivered as she answered. "You know why. You know I have no money."

"Well, have you no credit?" he asked, with an air of asperity creeping into his voice.

"Have you so soon forgotten your latest orders?" she asked bitterly. "You gave special instructions that I should have nothing more charged because business was falling off."

"Well, well, so I did; I had forgotten for the moment. You did speak to me about it," he continued kindly. Mr. Watte prided himself on his kindness. "I will see what can be done about a coat."

"I had hoped to go down and select on this afternoon while the clerk was in," said the wife hurriedly, but the man had gotten under way and his momentum carried him out into the hall and off to the office.

Before any further ideas occurred to him.

Mrs. Watte, left alone, sighed wearily. Then came a phone call from her husband's favorite niece who was at the railroad station. She was passing through the city, she said, and had stopped off to do a little shopping. "Can't you come down to Blank's store and help me select a coat?" she had asked. Mrs. Watte brightened at the suggestion. "Yes, I will meet you in the rest room in half an hour," she answered.

Stacking her dishes, she dressed and hastened to keep her appointment. The woman looked over all the coats, but she found none that she liked. She was disappointed to pay. Mrs. Watte also found a moderate priced coat that was "very becoming and a perfect fit."

"I am going to telephone uncle to come over here and we will all have lunch in the grill room," said the visitor. The niece was very fond of this niece and gladly responded.

"For the past three months I have been waiting at this office every day seeking permits to find employment. Such a condition has never before existed, the officials say, and they declare that in eight out of ten cases the children say they are forced to seek work because their father has gone to the war in Europe."

One of the most pathetic features of the situation is the withholding of funds formerly cheerfully given to a committee which permitted many children like those seeking work now to school. Formerly many wealthy families have donated money to the committee and the funds were used to keep children who applied for permits to work in school. If the child said he was forced to work in order to support a family, the committee saw to it that the family would have earned and thus kept the youngster in school.

Since the war the people who formerly made donations have "hoarded" their money. They are not making any gifts now—when they are needed so badly—and consequently the committee cannot help any of the children.

The child labor bureau will not issue a permit to any child who is not 14 years old. The mothers or fathers or whoever goes with them to the office to apply for the permit must take along proof of the child's age.

Many pathetic cases are heard during a day in the office of Miss J. V. Minor, agent for the bureau, who is the first the applicants for permits have to see.

"My daughter is 14," insists Mrs. J. as possible. Put through a wringer which has been loosened or squeezed the water out with the hands. Avoid twisting as that also causes shrinkage.

The following method gives very good results with little effort. Dissolve one large bar pure neutral soap in enough water to make two quarts of the solution. Keep in a fruit jar and use as needed. To this amount of soap use one cup of borax. Put the soap solution in a large receptacle containing soft cold water. Immerse the clothes and allow them to stand over night or for several hours. Rinse in clean cold soft water and hang to dry in a cool place.

DYNAMITE BOMBS IN HAY: INVITED SOLDIERS SLEEP

Berlin, Oct. 13.—The following incident in Belgium is being told by Berlin Lokal Anzeiger by a member of the Landwehr: "When we desired to pass the night in a certain town, an innkeeper with unusual friendliness offered us quarters for sixty men. When we investigated the sleeping quarters—the hay loft—we found hidden deep in the hay two big wine bottles with dynamite and fuses attached. Thereupon the innkeeper was tied to a ladder and guarded by a soldier. Then for a whole day he stood up against the door of the church. In the evening he was shot."

There are other means of attracting one's bird neighbors besides building bird houses. In winter if they are supplied food they will haunt the premises and the new bulletin gives plans for an adequate shelter where food may be left. In summer still other means must often be sought to make them sociable. On warm days they particularly appreciate fresh water for drinking and bathing. A shallow pool varying depth of only a foot across becomes a center of attraction for all the birds in the vicinity and it may be made with little effort and material. In the pool a small amount of cement is required, or if that is lacking, a pan with stones in it set in the ground will be equally serviceable.

TELLS HOW WOOLENS MIGHT BE WASHED

Miss Annabell Turner of Wisconsin University Offers Useful Information.

An even temperature throughout both the washing and drying process is most important in washing woolens. Tepid or lukewarm water is recommended, as that temperature can be most conveniently retained while drying. Woolens should never be dried close to a fire as the steam formed will cause the material to shrink.

A neutral soap should be used in the form of a thin solution. Avoid rubbing soap on the fabric. Many prefer ammonia or borax soap, and others use one or the other with soap. Borax or ammonia are especially valuable if the clothes are badly soiled or if the water is hard and much and do not rub. Use as many waters as necessary, being careful to have the temperatures as nearly the same

NATURAL COLOR TO GRAY BY AIR

Hair dye is not a natural color restorative. It simply STAINS the hair by powerful chemical action, and leaves a lustreless, dull finish that tells your friends what you are using.

The simple, clean and healthy method is by using Hays' Hair Health, which contains no harmful chemicals. It prepares the hair that the AIR—the pure, fresh air you breathe—causes it to COME BACK to its natural color.

It singles out every faded strand and restores it to the color intended—healthy, lustrous, full of life—NO OTHER RESULT BUT THIS CAN BE INTRODUCED.

If you want these undreamed of benefits in YOUR case—if you want to RE-PRODUCE and have a normal, healthy scalp, begin at once the use of Hays' Hair Health.

NATURAL method—Hays' Hair Health. A DYE, but a miraculous color restorer and hair tonic, all in one.

If it fails, druggist will refund price. 25c, 50c, and $1.00 at Drug Stores or direct from Hays' Hair Health Co., Newark, N. J.

Children of Reservites Forced To Abandon School for Factory

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Oct. 12.—A new, unexpected and depressing effect of Europe's great war is making itself felt in New York—and probably many other American cities—now.

Children—boys and girls of 14 and 15—are today being sent to work where yesterday they were being sent to school. With their fathers and older brothers being called to the colors by their native countries, these children are now forced to work in order that the mother and other little ones do not starve. The few pennies they keep the wolf away from the door.

How noticeable is the increase of the number of children seeking work the fall is shown by a visit to the child labor bureau of the board of health. Before a boy or girl under 16 years of age can work in New York they must get a certificate from this bureau, permitting them to do so.

For the past three months there has been a line of children sometimes a half a block long day seeking permits to find employment. Such a condition has never before existed, the officials say, and they declare that in eight out of ten cases the children say they are forced to seek work because their father has gone to the war in Europe.

One of the most pathetic features of the situation is the withholding of funds formerly cheerfully given to a committee which permitted many children like those seeking work now to school. Heart and Home Problems

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) How dear should girl and boy be before getting married?

(2) Is it wrong for third and fourth cousins to marry?

(3) What colors are going to be worn most this winter? Is it stylish to have belts like the skirts?

THANK YOU. (1) My dear, I strongly believe in nature marriages. No girl should think of marrying before she is twenty, and twenty-five is a better age. A boy should be twenty-two to twenty-six at least.

(2) When the relationship is so distant there would be no evil consequences resulting.

(3) Green, brown and blue are fashionable colors for this fall. All belts are made right on the skirt if they are of the same material. (Skirts of Roman stripes are popular.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is it proper for a girl of sixteen to correspond with a boy of sixteen?

(2) Is it wrong for a girl to wear on school nights or to shows with a girl friend of yours or a boy of your age?

(3) Is it proper for a girl to wear a boy's ring?

(4) Is it proper for girls and boys to exchange pictures?

THANK YOU. (1) That depends on the kind of letters you write. Friendly, sensible letters would do no harm.

(2) I very much disapprove of my girls going out on school nights. Put all your time on your studies. When you have finished school you can go offener.

(3) Never wear a boy's ring till you are old enough to wear an engagement ring.

(4) If the girl and boy are very good comrades it might do, but make it a very rare thing. It cheapens a girl for a number of boys to be able to show her picture."

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) What is good to remove freckles?

(2) Are low heels worn on shoes this season? T. M. B.

THANK YOU. (1) I have nothing to say about nothing that will remove freckles.

(2) Yes.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will you kindly tell me how to clean a child's boots? I have a coat which is badly spotted and soiled? A FRIEND.

The Last Shot

(Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons)

"Well, what, man, what?" he demanded. He feared that the girl might be dead. Anything that could upset Lanstron in this fashion struck a chord of sympathy and apprehension.

Lanstron advanced to the table, pressed his hands on the edge, and, now master of himself, began an account of Martia's offer. Partow's formless arms lay inert on the table, his soft, pudgy fingers outspread on the nap and his bulk settled deep in the chair, while his eagle eyes were seeing through Lanstron, through a mountain range, into the eyes of a woman and a general on the veranda of an enemy's headquarters. The plan meant giving, giving in the hope of receiving in return. Would he get the return?

"A woman was the ideal one for the task we trusted to Feller," he mused, "a gentlewoman, big enough, adroit enough, with her soul in the work as no paid woman could be! There seemed no such one in the world!"

"But to let her do it!" gasped Lanstron.

"It is her suggestion, not yours? She offers herself? She wants no permission?" Partow asked sharply.

"Entirely her suggestion," said Lanstron. "She offers herself for her country, with her soul in the work as no paid woman could be! There seemed no such one in the world!"

Partow raised his arms. They were not formless as he brought them down with sledge-hammer force to the table.

"Your tendon of Achilles? My boy, she is your sword-arm!" His sturdy forefinger ran along the line of frontier under his eye with little staccato taps. "Eh?" he chuckled significantly, finger poised.

"Let them up the Bordir road and on to redoubts 36 and 37, you mean?" asked Lanstron.

"You have it! The position looks important, but so well do we command it that it is not really vital. Yes, the Bordir road is her bait for Westerling!" Partow waved his hand as if the affair were settled.

"But," interjected Lanstron, "we have also to decide on the point of the main defense which she is to make. Westerling thinks it weak."

"Hum-m!" grumbled Partow. "That is not necessary to start with. We can let that to her later over the telephone, can't we, eh?"

"She asked for it now."

"Why?" demanded Partow with one of his shrewd, piercing looks.

"She did not say, but I can guess," explained Lanstron. "She must put all her cards on the table; she must tell Westerling all she knows at once. If she tells him piecemeal it might lead to the supposition that she still had some means of communication with the Browns."

"Of course, of course!" Partow spat out the fat of his hand resoundingly on the map. "As I decided the first time I met her, she has a head, and such a woman has a head for that."

"Nothing there is no beating her," he was looking straight into Lanstron's eyes. "Well, I think we have the point where we could draw the line on the main line, eh?"

"On the apron of the approach from the Engadir valley. We yield the advantage, redoubts on either side."

"Meanwhile, we have massed heavily on the redoubt. We retake the advantage redoubts in a counter-attack and—"

Partow brought his fist into his palm with a smack.

"Yes, if we could do that! If we could let them expend their attack on the redoubts, put in Lanstron very excitedly.

"She must! She shall help!" Partow was on his feet. He had reached across the table and seized Lanstron's hand in a powerful if flesh-padded grip. Then he turned Lanstron toward the door of his bedroom and gave him a mighty slap of the hand.

"My boy, the bright hope of Lanstron we have is holding the wire to Lanstron. Tell her that a bearded old bohemian, who can kneel as gracefully as a rheumatic rhinoceros, is on both knees at her feet, kissing her hands and trying his best, in the name of mercy, to keep from breaking into verse of his own composition."

Back at the telephone, Lanstron, in the fervor of the cheer and the enthusiasm that had transported his chief, gave Martia Partow's message.

"You, Martia, are our brightest hope of victory!"

"Yes!" the monosyllable was detached, dismal, labored. "A woman can be that!" she exclaimed in an uncertain tone, which grew into the distraction of clipped words and broken sentences. "A woman play-acting—a woman acting the most revolting hypocrisy—influences the issue between two nations! Her deceit deals in the lives of sons precious to fathers and mothers, the fate of frontiers, of institutions! Think of it! Think of machines costing countless millions—machines of flesh and blood, with their destinies shaped by one little bit of lying information! Think of the folly of any civilization that stakes its triumphs on such a gamble! Am I not right? Isn't it true? Isn't it?"

"Yes, yes, Martia! But—!" If she were weakening it was not in place to try to strengthen her purpose. "It will be sooner and fighting, won't it, Lanny?" she asked in a small, tense voice.

"Yes."

"And the only real end that means real peace is to prove that the weak can hold back the strong from their threshold?"

"Yes."

Even now Westerling might be on the veranda, perhaps waiting for news that would enable him to crush the weak; to prove that the law of five pounds of human flesh against three, and five bayonets against three, is the law of civilization.

"Yes, yes, yes!" The constriction was gone from her throat; there was a drum-beat in her soul. "Depend on me, Lanny!" It was Feller's favorite phrase spoken by the one who was to take his place. "Yes, I'm ready to make any sacrifice now. For what?"

"What is one woman compared to such a purpose? I don't care what is said of me or what becomes of me if we can win! Good-by, Lanny, till I call you up again! And God with us!"

"God with us!" Partow had said, over and over. The saying had come to be repeated by hard-headed, agnostic staff-officers, who believed that the deity had no relation to the efficiency of gun-fire. The Brown infantrymen even were beginning to mutter it in the midst of action.

Waiting on the path of the second terrace for Westerling to come, Martia realized the full meaning of her task. Day in and day out she was to have suspense at her elbow and the horror of hypocrisy on her conscience, the while keeping her wits nicely balanced. When she saw Westerling appear on the veranda and start over the lawn she felt dizzy and uncertain of her capabilities.

"I have considered all that you have said for my guidance and I have decided," she began.

She heard her own voice with the relief of a singer in a debut who, with knees shaking, finds that her notes are true. She was looking directly at Westerling in profound seriousness.

Though knees shook, lips and chin could aid eyes in revealing the painful fatigue of a battle that had raged in the mind of a woman who went away for half an hour to think for herself.

"I have concluded," she went on, "that it is an occasion for the sacrifice of private ethics to a great purpose, the sooner to end the slaughter."

"All true!" whispered an inner voice. Its tone was Lanny's, in the old days of their comradeship. It gave her strength. All true!

"Yes, an end—a speedy end!" said Westerling with a fine, inflexible emphasis. "That is your prayer and mine and the prayer of all lovers of humanity."

"It is little that I know, but such as it is you shall have it," she began, conscious of his guarded scrutiny.

When she told him of Bordir, the weak point in the first line of the Browns' defense, she noted no change in his steady look; but with the mention of Engadir in the main line she detected a gleam in his eyes that had the merciless delight of a cutting edge of steel. "I have made my sacrifice to some purpose? The information is worth something to you?" she asked wistfully.

"Yes, yes! Yes, it promises that way," he replied thoughtfully.

Quietly he began a considerate catechism. Soon she was subtly understanding that her answers lacked the convincing details that he sought. She longed to avert her eyes from his for an instant, but she knew that this would be fatal. She felt the force of him directed in professional channels, free of all personal relations, beating as a strong light on her bare statements. How could a woman ever have learned two such vital secrets?

How could it happen that two such critical points as Bordir and Engadir should go undefended? No tactician, no engineer but would have realized their strategic importance. Did she know what she was saying? How did she get her knowledge? These, she understood, were the real questions that underlay Westerling's polite indirection.

"But I have not told you the sources of my information! Isn't that like a woman!" she exclaimed. "You see, it did not concern me at all at the time I heard it. I didn't even realize its importance and I didn't hear much," she proceeded, her introduction giving time for improvisation.

"You see, Partow was inspecting the premises with Colonel Lanstron. My mother had known Partow in her younger days when my grandfather was premier. We had them both to luncheon."

"Yes?" put in Westerling, betraying his eagerness. Partow and Lanstron! Then her source was one of authority, not the gossip of subalterns!

"And it occurs to me now that, even while he was our guest," she interjected in sudden indignation—"that even while he was our guest Partow was planning to make our grounds a redoubt!"

"After luncheon I remember Partow saying, 'We are going to have a look at the crops,' and they went for a walk out to the knoll where the fighting began."

"Yes! When was this?" Westerling asked keenly.

"Only about six weeks ago," answered Martia.

"Later, I came upon them unexpectedly after they had returned," she went on. "They were sitting there on that seat concealed by the shrubbery. I was on the terrace steps unobserved and I couldn't help overhearing them. Their voices grew louder with the interest of their discussion. I caught something about appropriations and aeroplanes and Bordir and Engadir, and saw that Lanstron was pleading with his chief. He wanted a sum appealed for them. He wanted a sum appealed for them. He wanted a sum appealed for them. He wanted a sum ap-

he had just heard. But he did not prolong the grasp. He was as eager to be away to his work as she to be alone. "I think it will. You will know in the morning," he added.

His steps were sturdier than ever in the power of five against three as he started back to the house. When he reached the veranda, Bouchard, the saturnine chief of intelligence, appeared in the doorway of the dining-room; or, rather, reappeared, for he had been standing there throughout the interview of Westerling and Martia, whose heads were just visible, above the terrace wall, to his hawk eyes.

"A little promenade in the open and your mind made up," said Westerling, clapping Bouchard on the shoulder.

"Something about an attack to-night?" asked Bouchard.

"You guess right. Call the others."

Five minutes later he was seated at the head of the dining-room table with his chiefs around him waiting for their chairman to speak. He asked some categorical questions almost perfunctorily, and the answer to each was, "Ready!" with, in some instances, a qualification—the qualification made by regimental and brigade commanders that, though they could take the position in front of them, the cost would be heavy. Yes, all were willing and ready for the first general assault of the war, but they wanted to state the costs as a matter of professional self-defense.

Westerling could pose when it served his purpose. Now he rose and, going to one of the wall maps, indicated a point with his forefinger.

"If we get that we have the most vital position, haven't we?"

Some uttered a word of assent; some only nodded. A glance or two of curiosity was exchanged. Why should the chief of staff ask so elementary a question? Westerling was not unconscious of the glances or of their meaning. They gave dramatic value to his next remark.

"We are going to mass for our main attack in front at Bordir!"

"But," exclaimed four or five officers at once, "that is the heart of the position! That is—"

"I believe it is weak—that it will fall, and tonight!"

"You have information, then, information that I have not?" asked Bouchard.

"No more than you," replied Westerling. "Not as much if you have anything new."

"Nothing!" admitted Bouchard wryly. He lowered his head under Westerling's penetrating look in the consciousness of failure.

"I am going on a conviction—on putting two and two together!" Westerling announced. "I am going on my experience as a soldier, as a chief of staff. If I am wrong, I take the responsibility. If I am right, Bordir will be ours before morning. It is settled!"

"If you are right, then," exclaimed Turcas—"well, then it's genius or—"

He did not finish the sentence. He had been about to say coincidence; while Westerling knew that if he were right all the rising skepticism in certain quarters, owing to the delay in his program, would be silenced. His prestige would be unassailable.

propriated for fortifications to be applied to building planes and dirigibles. Finally, Partow consented, and I recall his exact words: 'They're shockingly archaically defended, especially Engadir,' he said, 'but they can wait until we get further appropriations in the fall!'"

She was so far under the spell of her own invention that she believed the reality of her words, reflected in her wide-open eyes which seemed to have nothing to hide.

"That is all," she exclaimed with a shudder—"all my eavesdropping, all my breach of confidence! If it is—"

and her voice trembled with the intensity of the one purpose that was shining with the light of truth through the murk of her deception—"it will only help to end the slaughter!" She held out her hand convulsively in parting as if she would leave the rest with him.

"I think it will," he said soberly. "I think it will prove that you have done a great service," he repeated as he caught both her hands, which were cold from her ordeal. His own were warm with the strong beating of his heart, stirred by the promise of what

Dinner Stories

In a newly published book of reminiscences a story is told of the late Sir William Harcourt. He was about to get into a hansom when a friend, passing in a brougham, offered to give the right honorable gentleman, whose avoirdupois was considerable, a lift to his town house. Sir William accepted the offer and gave the disappointed Jehu a shilling. "Only a bobby, guv'nor," he asked ruefully. "Certainly," was the reply. "I never got into your cab." "But, guv'nor," responded the Jehu, "consider the fright you gave the boss."

Johnny Jones, the office boy, had been detected in a lie. It was not one of the ordinary prevarications of the everyday world and, moreover, to make the crime more grievous, he had persisted in adhering to his original mendacious statement.

"Do you know, lad," asked a fatherly clerk in a kindly fashion, "what becomes of young lads who trifle with the truth?"

"Aye," was the assured reply; "bosses send them out as travelers when they grow up."

An elderly married couple each of weighty proportions, were about to take a ride in a motor car. As the husband made no attempt to assist his wife into the car, she turned to him and said: "My dear, you're not nearly so gallant as you were when you were a boy." "My dear, you're not nearly so boyant as you were when you were a girl," the husband replied.

Makes Stubborn Coughs Vanish in a Hurry

Surprisingly Good Cough Syrup
Easily and Cheaply
Made at Home

If some one in your family has an obstinate cough or a bad throat or chest cold that has been hanging on and refuses to yield to treatment, get from any drug store 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex and make it into a pint of cough syrup, and watch that cough vanish.

Pour the 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (50 cents worth) into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. The total cost is about 54 cents, and gives you a full pint—a family supply of a most effective remedy.

A day's use will usually overcome a hard cough. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions with Pinex.
Keep it handy and has a pleasant taste.
Children like it.

It's really remarkable how promptly and easily it loosens the dry, hoarse or tight cough and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough. A splendid remedy for bronchitis, winter coughs, bronchial asthma and whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine opium, a natural, rich in guaiacum, which is so healing to the membranes.

Avoid disappointment by asking your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pinex," and do not accept anything less. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction goes with this preparation or money promptly refunded.

Science Sustains Us

Blatz Beer is not only pure and wholesome, it is also most nutritious. Its cleanliness, its quality, its preferability, all are evident to those who know merit.

Every desirable feature of worth is part and parcel of Blatz policy—that's why so many particular people prefer Blatz Beer.

WERE WED AT HARMONY ON SATURDAY EVENING

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Harmony, Oct. 12.—A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Reilly and family evening, Oct. 10th, when their eldest son, Charles, was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth A. Truesdale of Janesville. At promptly eight o'clock Miss Florence Roberts of Janesville played the wedding march, and the bridal couple descended the stairs, attended by Art and Dora Hoag, brother and sister of the groom. They stood beneath an arch of asparagus, white dahlias and carnations. The bride was attired in light blue crepe de meteur silk and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The bridesmaid wore light blue, non-veiling. The groom wore a suit of dark blue. The ring ceremony was used. Rev. James Robinson, pastor of the U. B. church of Janesville, officiated. After congratulations all were invited to the dining room, where a two course supper was served. Only the immediate family and a few intimate friends were present. The bride and groom received many useful gifts. The happy couple will begin housekeeping at once on the groom's farm near Milton. All join in wishing them happiness and prosperity.
